Growing Season

The 2012 growing season was remarkably average. In terms of quality, average in Walla Walla means excellent. Temperatures were perfect for growing grapes and the finish to the season allowed ample time for the fruit to reach full ripeness. As is typical we had big swings in the daytime highs to nighttime lows that allow our grapes to preserve their acidity.

Vineyard

Wahluke Slope AVA consists of 6,645 acres planted of several different types of wine grapes. Currently there are twenty vineyards within the Wahluke Slope AVA. The Wahluke Slope is Washington's warmest and driest region.

Rosebud Vineyard, Wahluke Slope AVA

Planted in the 1980's by Roy Dodson, Rosebud Vineyard has a long tradition of growing fruit for some of Washington's largest wineries. Recently more and more small wineries have begun to notice the quality of the Dodson family's fruit.

Barrel Composition

100% Stainless steel barrels

Tasting Notes

Crisp and clean upon the palate with only a touch of sweetness, this wine is perfect for the patio on a warm day or with your favorite meal of smoked fish (totally up to you). 3.2 pH and 5.9 g/L of titratable acidity.
